

From: UK-v-McDonalds.org <info@france-v-mcdonalds.org>
Subject: Rickmansworth
Date: December 18, 2015 at 05:40
To: Steve.Easterbrook@us.mcd.com

Mr. Easterbrook,

I saw on Google Analytics that someone connected to my new website White-Collar-Criminals.com from Rickmansworth. I checked on a map and find out it was near Watford. This is not a coincidence. I guess you went back to your hometown for the holidays.

I am glad to see you personally read my emails.

I believe you are very badly advised. Don't believe anything this French lawyer, Eric Andrieu, said. You must know by now that he is just trying to cover his ass.

Malcolm Hicks said, or at least pretended, he would ask for a 2nd opinion. He told me he would get back to me but he never did. It's quite obvious why, don't you think? This 2nd law firm, if they have competent lawyers, probably told you that McDonald's was in trouble and advised not to say anything. Like they say... don't talk you walk.

I am not happy to have to create websites like White-Collar-Criminals.com

I wish I didn't have to do this. But you don't leave me much choice. You must know by now that the "game" is a fraud in Europe. Have you done anything to stop the French edition in 2015? No. what about the current on-going fraud happening in Germany? It would be so simple for you to make it stop.

You recently said in the New York Times you wanted to be a change agent for good but it's clear it's BS and you only say this for public relations. If I am wrong, prove it. It's still time to show an ounce of good faith and to cease the ongoing fraud which is happening in Germany right now.

And I am still waiting for the full payment of the prizes I should have won in 2011 had the game not been rigged. Me and McDonald's are in a quasi-contractual relation. There is a legal obligation here.

Best regards,

Vincent Le Corre